The secret of producing the perfect cup of Tea is the experience from Venture Tea. The way these professionals practice their art and develop their precise palate skills is astounding. It still takes years of training and experience to be able to judge with complete accuracy up to 10,000 different tea samples a week, selecting only those that are right for the Venture Tea Blends. Strict care and hygiene is monitored throughout the process to ensure a product that conforms to internationally recognized quality standards.

The company has thrived on innovation & novelty that enables its clientele to obtain Teas under Private Label, Branded or mere Bulk Purchase. Therefore the company is aptly positioned to offer competitive solutions for acquisition, pricing, production, and packaging of their teas.

"Do something right and people will enjoy it. Keep doing it right and they'll keep coming back for more."

Do something right and people will enjoy it. Keep doing it right and they'll keep coming back for more. Its common sense, but it's worked for Venture Tea It is not as easy as it sounds, but it's achievable if you only ever use the best quality ingredients and take genuine pride in what you do. The exact same care and attention in serving customers at Venture Tea goes into selecting precisely the accurate quality teas for the blends. We've spent decades improving and we don't intend to stop now!

WHY CEYLON TEA

Ceylon Tea

Ceylon Tea is grown and produced according to uncompromising, traditional methods and standards since 1880.

The alchemy of land, sun and rain in the Paradise Island of Ceylon, as it was known then, presented the ideal climatic conditions for cultivation of tea. Ceylon added a new dimension to tea by producing variations in taste, quality, character and appearance, largely based on terroir of the region. Ceylon tea with its distinct taste and character became every consumer's favorite cuppa.

Regional Tea

Ceylon Tea is much loved for its unmatched quality and variety in taste, character and appearance based on the different parts of its tea growing regions. The 6 agro climatic regions - Nuwara Eliya, Uva, Uda Pussellawa, Dimbula, Kandy & Ruhuna.

Kandy Medium Grown

Kandy was the first region in Sri Lanka in which tea was grown. Tea plantations in this area are located at an elevation of approx. 2000-4000ft above sea level.

Nuwara Eliya High Grown

Plantations are located at an elevation of approx. 6000 ft above sea level.

Dimbula High Grown

Dimbula teas are high grown on plantations at an elevation of approx. 5000 - 6000 ft above sea level

Uva High & Medium Grown

Located at an elevation of 2000 - 4000 ft, these plantations are mostly located on the eastern slopes of Sri Lanka.

Ruhuna Low Grown

Including the regions in the South - Western Coast, these plantations are mostly located at sea level.

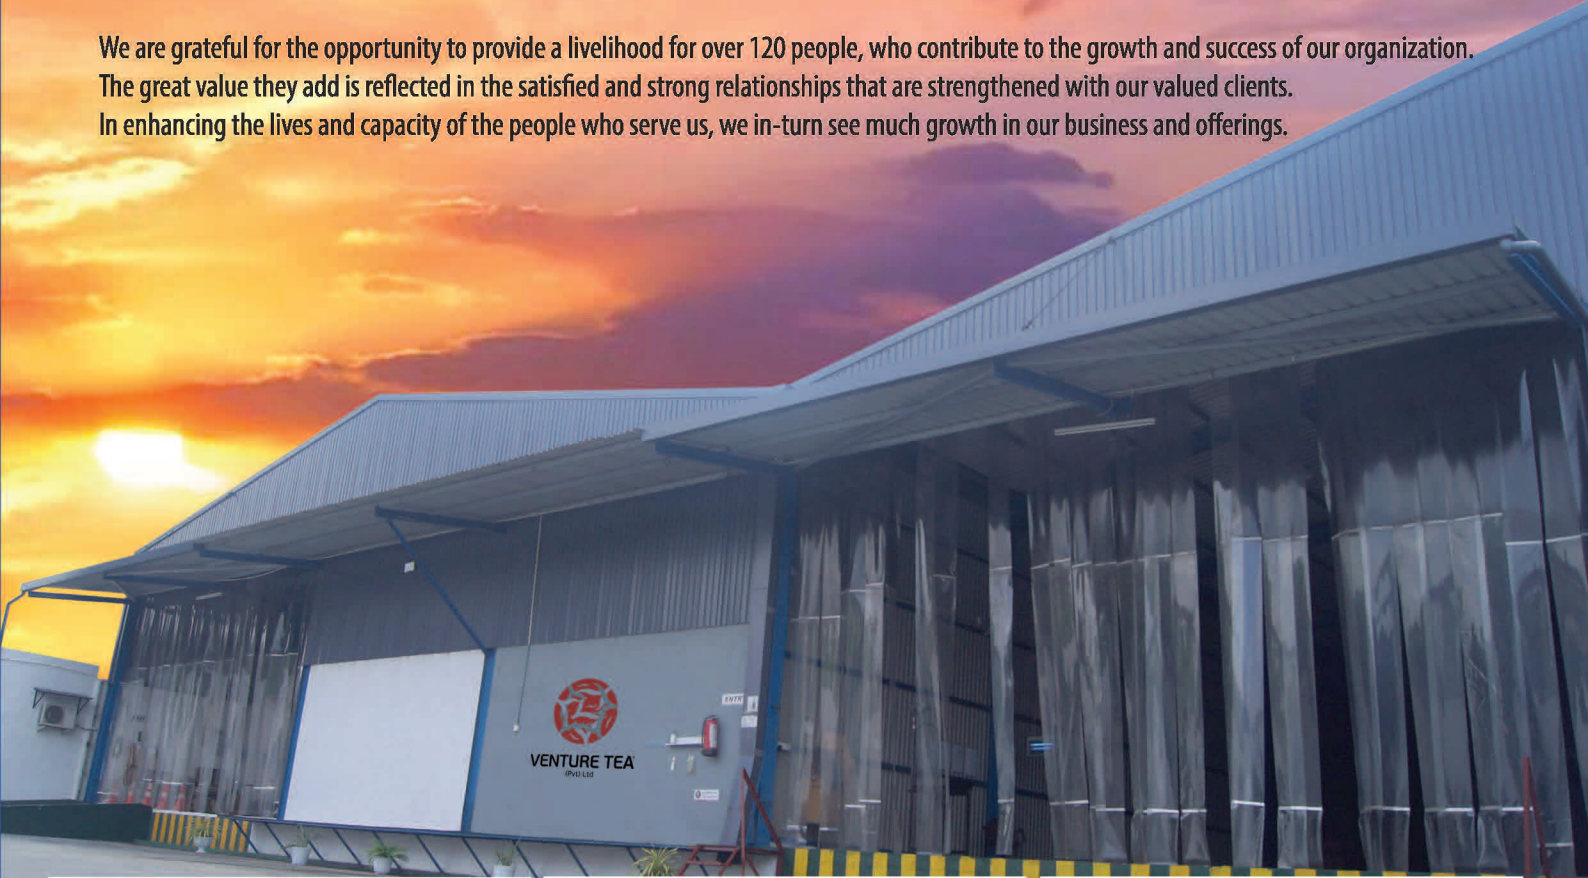

Uda Pussellawa High Grown

Uda Pussellawa teas are high grown on plantations at an elevation of approx. 5000 - 6000 ft above sea level.

We do tea differently

Regional Tea OF CEYLON

Sri Lanka is a small island spanning an area of 65,610 sq kms. Located in the Indian Ocean it is infamous for its unique and flavourful teas known the world over as Ceylon Teas. Vastly different characteristics can be noticed in Ceylon Teas even though the actual plantation areas are almost adjacent to each other within an area of approx 2000sq kms. However the altitudes and climatic conditions vary from region to region thus bringing out the unique character which distinguishes each regional tea from others. Temperatures are more or less within a constant range throughout most of the year. However, seasonal rainfall and wind patterns influence the unique characteristics of the teas –which is not normally found in other tea growing nations of the world.

Refreshing DIMBULA T345

The teas of Dimbula, like all high-grown teas, are slow-growing and small-leaved. The complex geography of the region produces a variety of beneficent microclimates, which show up as differences in flavor. All, however, share the Dimbula character: a tea that produces a fine golden-orange hue in the cup, with a distinctive freshness to the flavor that leaves a clean feeling in the mouth after the tea is drunk. During the western quality season between March and May, the aromatic qualities of Dimbula tea increase, and notes of jasmine mixed with cypress can be detected.

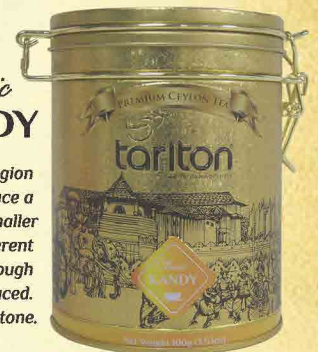

Predominant RUHUNA T347

Ruhuna teas are defined as 'low-grown'. The tea-estates of the region all lie at altitudes between sea level and 2,000ft. The soil of Ruhuna, combined with the low elevation of the estates, causes the tea-bush to grow rapidly, producing a long, beautiful leaf that turns intensely black on withering and is particularly suited to 'rolling'. Ruhuna factories produce a wide variety of leaf styles and sizes, from prized 'tips' through whole- and semi-whole-leaf teas to 'fannings' and CTC.

Equisite UVA T343

The unique character of Uva tea is recognized and acknowledged all over the world. It was with tea grown and manufactured on his Uva estates that Sir Thomas Lipton, the great Victorian magnate, first persuaded Americans to take up the tea-drinking habit. The mellow, distinguished from that of any other. The Uva region produces a leaf that is more blackened by withering than that of any other district. The range of teas produced is wide. The tea has a pungent and slightly mentholated character.

Classic KANDY T344

The teas of the Kandy region are said to be particularly flavorsome. In fact, the region produces a broad range of strengths and styles: estates at lower elevations produce a larger leaf which gives a stronger-flavored beverage, while those higher-up grow a smaller leaf that yields a more subtle and delicate flavor. Kandy factories a broad mix of different 'grades' or leaf-particle sizes, from whole-leaf and semi-broken also produce grades through broken orange pekoes or 'BOPs' to BOP fannings. CTC-style teas are also produced. Kandy teas tend to produce a relatively bright infusion with a coppery tone.

Distinctive NUWARA ELIYA T346

Grown at high elevation at the very center of Sri Lanka's hill country, Nuwara Eliya tea enjoys two 'quality seasons, the eastern as well as the western. The balance between the two climatic systems varies from estate to estate. The tea produced here has a refined quality that easily sets it apart from lower-grown varieties. High altitude and year-round low temperatures produce a very slow-growing bush with unusually small leaves that take on an orange hue. The infused leaf acquires a greenish-yellow tone, with a subtle golden hue and a delicate yet fragrant bouquet.
